elections for the European Parliament were still held in the UK this week and many of us will know how much it costs to do so and how much it costs to stay there while it happens. I'm in that category, as I will need to travel to Strasbourg in the next few weeks and back again to vote, meaning that I'll be away from my family for a week. As it's my first European election, I've been thinking a lot about democracy and how European politics are different from the ones I'm used to at home. It might seem weird that I'd be voting in the first place when I'm not resident in the UK but I'm registered to vote there. I still have dual citizenship with an Irish passport and while I voted in the referendum, I couldn't vote on the side of the EU. The EU referendum was ultimately undemocratic to me but it was still really important to show support for all those who wanted the UK to remain part of the EU.
The reality is that you can vote for someone and they will never serve in the legislature and you can vote for someone and
